

Funds On Hand For Construction

HAZLETON—Z. H. Confair, president of the Keystone Shortway Assn., declared here last night he is confident the entire Shortway from Stroudsburg to Sharon can be completed by 1965.

He based his statement on the fact that 90 percent of the construction costs for the Shortway are already available in Washington under the federal interstate highway aid program. The other 10 percent, Confair added, has been set aside in Harrisburg for use by the State Highways Department.

The association is urging Gov. George M. Leader to approve a May 30 date for ground-breaking ceremonies at one or more points along the proposed 291-mile superhighway. An early start on construction work is necessary, Confair said, if the 1965 target date is to be met.

Confair spoke last night at a meeting attended by 25 representatives from motor clubs, chambers of commerce, construction and trucking firms and business firms in Luzerne County.

New Charter

The group was briefed on the new charter of the Shortway Assn. under which a director is to be elected from each of the 27 counties bordering on the Shortway. Martin D. Cohn, Hazleton attorney, was named to serve as temporary director from Luzerne County, pending a formal organization meeting at a later date.

Election of a permanent director was postponed last night when the four Wilkes-Barre representatives asked for more time in which to explain the Keystone Shortway story to residents of that area. They said a meeting will be called for March 10 to enlist Wilkes-Barre organizations in full support of the Shortway.

Besides the Wilkes-Barre delegations, representatives were present from Hazleton, Nanticoke, Pittston and White Haven. Paul Cerula, of Hazleton, a member of the organizing committee for the eastern third of Pennsylvania, presided. Also attending were C. E. Noyes, executive secretary of the association, and Curtis Thomas, of Williamsport, middle district finance chairman.

Negative Accent In Trenton

TRENTON, N. J., Feb. 10 (AP)—The New Jersey Legislature, in a session marked by insurgent votes by Essex and Hudson Assembly Democrats, today put the accent on the negative.

At the end of the argumentative session, no action had been taken on rent control, a one-cent increase in the gasoline tax, revival of the state law enforcement council, or the controversial reappointment of Grover C. Richmond Jr. as attorney general.

Essex and Hudson Democrats

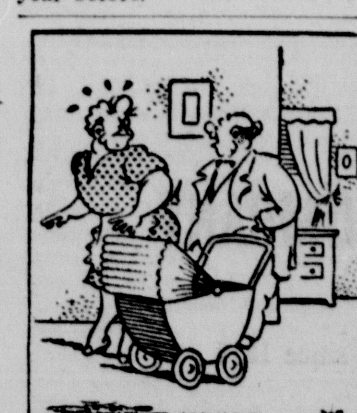

Essex and Hudson Democrats belted the party traces twice on votes in the Assembly and still refused to back the administration's gasoline tax increase bill. Assembly Speaker Hyland (D-Camden) told newsmen at the start of the day's session that an administration bill to increase the gasoline tax from four cents a gallon to five for highway construction would not come to a vote.

The bill was blocked last week by the Essex and Hudson County Assembly delegations. Hyland said they still want time to study the measure, but it will not be held up indefinitely.

Vessels Set For Seal Hunt

HALIFAX, N. S., Feb. 10 (AP)—Eight vessels are being made ready here for the spring seal hunt, but in Newfoundland— which once sent out as many as 20,000 men in sealers—only one ship is making up this year.

Last year seven vessels sailed from Halifax and six from Newfoundland. The catch was only 26,182, compared to 72,586 the year before.

Record Survey To Aid Education

EDITOR'S NOTE—This is the 10th in a series of articles to be written by Leonard Randolph, who was a first hand observer at Gov. George Leader's state education conference in Harrisburg recently.

By Leonard Randolph
IT WILL take a considerable amount of time for the Department of Public Instruction to bring out its report on the January Governor's Conference on Improvement of Instruction in Pennsylvania.

Meanwhile, in Monroe County, The Daily Record will attempt to fill a long-felt void where public attitudes toward education are concerned.

Last week The Daily Record mailed questionnaires to each classroom teacher in Monroe County schools. The forms all went to administrators, all members of the faculty at East Stroudsburg State Teachers College, school board presidents and secretaries and the presidents of County PTA groups.

Answers to those questionnaires have already begun to come in to the Record office. Hoping to begin collation of information from the questionnaires as soon as possible, The Daily Record asked those receiving them to observe a Feb. 15 deadline for their return to us.

There are ample reasons for this. Most important of these is the fact that The Record survey of Monroe County education in 1958 may prove of great value to the Department of Public Instruction or other levels of State government in any overall study of education needs.

Monroe County can — and should — qualify as a nearly "average" county so far as population and school areas are concerned. It is neither exclusively metropolitan nor rural in nature. Its school districts are neither unusually "rich" or abnormally "poor."

the average education accomplishment on a State-wide basis.

The Monroe County Education Survey is the first of its kind ever undertaken by a daily newspaper. For this reason, its success may have a lasting and far-reaching effect on education in general in Pennsylvania.

If teachers, administrators, school directors and others respond quickly and candidly to the questions which have been asked of them, this will offer marked and strong encouragement to other newspapers in the State.

As has been stated previously in the series of articles on the Harrisburg conference, one of the most serious problems facing education in America as a whole has been, and continues to be, the matter of public relations.

The Daily Record feels that nearly all people — whether they are parents with children in school or families without children — are ready and eager to learn about education. The Daily Record feels that education is one of the most important subjects with which it, as a newspaper, can be concerned on a day-to-day basis.

Through the series of articles which will appear in this newspaper and which will be based on answers to the Monroe Education Survey received this week, everyone in Monroe County may gain a greater insight into the schools of today — and tomorrow.

Questions contained in the survey touch on the major issues in education: guidance, counseling, classroom instruction, supervision and teaching as a profession.

The basis for The Record's survey is a simple one: That an honest attempt should be made — on the part of those who are on the inside and know the issues and those who want to know — to understand and work together for the betterment of education.

Hardest Blow Of Winter Holds East

By The Associated Press

A WINTER storm that struck the heaviest weather blow of the season in the East clung to that area tonight and spread icy cold, snow and freezing rain into other sections as far south as the Gulf states.

After three days of frigid temperatures and storms the nation counted a weather death toll of at least 46, including 18 in New York, 8 in Massachusetts and 6 in Pennsylvania.

Other states reporting deaths attributed to the weather were Oklahoma 5, Texas 3, Iowa 3, Illinois 2 and Indiana 1.

About half of the dead were killed in weather-related traffic mishaps. The remainder suffered heart attacks shoveling snow or attempting to free automobiles stuck in snowbanks.

The frigid slick belt grew eastward from the Texas Panhandle region, across parts of Oklahoma, Louisiana and Mississippi, fed by a mingling of super-chilled air from the North and sudden clouds from the Gulf of Mexico.

Heavy new snow fell in western New York atop choking accumulations from a weekend storm termed by the Weather Bureau the worst in 25 years for Upstate New York.

Upper Plains

The Upper Plains and Midwest remained frozen by a cold air mass which dipped temperatures from 5 to 20 below zero for three consecutive days.

Sleet and freezing rain stopped bus service in hilly Vicksburg, Miss., and closed schools in the Lower Mississippi Valley area. Driving conditions were hazardous in a wide slippery area.

Ice accumulation was expected in the Gulf states through today as rains move eastward into sub-freezing air from south Texas where 1/2 to 1/4-inch accumulations were recorded.

The Weather Bureau said a snow and sleet coat of up to two inches was spread in central Mississippi.

In the Northeast, racing winds subsided after piling a 12-inch snowfall into 15-foot drifts Sunday night in Upstate New York. The storm brought to 38 inches the recent snow accumulation at Syracuse.

Still more snow spread in the section of Lake Erie shoreline from northeastern Ohio to the Buffalo region and to the lee of Lake Ontario in northwestern New York. As much as 15 inches more snow was expected in some localities.

Schools Close

Schools and industries remained closed down yesterday while snowplows bucked away to re-establish roadways through drifts. Many farm households remained isolated. Hundreds of cars lay under snow mounds where motorists abandoned them.

The north central region and Upper New England faced another night of intense cold after readings of 25 below zero at Greenville, Maine, and -22 at International Falls, Minn., were recorded early Monday.

The current stark weather was immensely costly in terms of lost production and halted business, in wages of laborers pitted against snow, and in record fuel consumption for heating. No one could say surely how many deaths resulted from it.

Pensions Grow

NEW YORK, Feb. 10 (AP)—Assets of private and public employee pension funds are growing at the rate of four billion dollars a year and now total nearly 40 billion dollars, a meeting of the American Bankers Assn. was told today.

Possibilities

The possibility of cave-ins, fires and explosions last night caused the public works director, August W. Heckman, to declare a state of emergency.

Some 100,000 residents, about a third of the population, found themselves without any water pressure for a time. Later pressure was brought up enough to provide drinking water and a safe level for fighting any fires.

Lights Add Glow To Area Sky

HARRISBURG, Pa., Feb. 10 (AP)—The U. S. Weather Bureau said the most spectacular phenomenon tonight was the Aurora Borealis or Northern Lights putting on a most magnificent display of color and luminosity.

The lights were visible over wide areas of the East and other parts of the nation.

In spite of the red flame — colored sky, the weather will continue very cold over Pennsylvania for the next couple of days, the bureau said.

The Northern Lights were plainly visible in all portions of Monroe County last night and The Daily Record was swamped with telephone calls inquiring about the situation and offering information.

French Premier Summons Cabinet Into Session To Discuss Bombing From Air

PARIS, Feb. 10 (AP)—French Premier Felix Gaillard, under pressure from the United States and Britain, summoned his Cabinet into special session tonight to consider repercussions of the attack by French warplanes on a Tunisian border village.

The government leaders met almost three hours, but there was no announcement on their talks after the session ended. A spokesman indicated a government statement might be made in the National Assembly tomorrow.

Gaillard recalled his president minister in Algeria, Robert Lacoste, to report personally to the Cabinet on the raid Saturday on Sakiet Sidi Youssef near the Algerian border.

The Cabinet was reported ready to take steps to see that military commanders are no longer allowed to stage such raids on their own authority.

Gaillard, the financial wizard who came to the premiership when France was tottering on the brink of economic disaster, now is faced with his biggest diplomatic task.

The French claim the attack was launched to wipe out Algerian rebels hiding in Tunisian sanctuaries and firing at French observation planes over Algerian territory.

Military Blunder

But the venture was being viewed here as a military blunder that pushed France's back to the wall diplomatically.

The Tunisians claim 78 persons killed and 84 wounded as twin-engine bombers unloaded bombs and fighter planes swooped down with machine guns blazing in the hour-long, daylight raid.

The United States officially was profoundly disturbed. Britain said it hoped the situation wouldn't explode into something worse.

Check Size Undecided

HARRISBURG, Feb. 10 (AP)—State officials couldn't get together today on the size of a check to be turned over to the federal government in payment for state employees' social security taxes.

The whole matter involving over 30 million dollars—was put off until tomorrow.

Due Terms

The money is due under terms of a federal-state contract signed by Gov. Leader last Aug. 28. It brought the state and school retirement plans and those state employees outside such plans under social security coverage, retroactive to Jan. 1, 1956. The payment would be for the years 1956 and 1957.

The Office of Administration asked the auditor general's department to approve a check for $31,566,099. The Labor and Industry Department said the check should be $31,741,519 and added at the same time that this would be the largest single payment ever made to the federal government for social security.

Honored

He told the assembly he felt a "high sense of honor and a deep almost painful sense of humility" that "my colleagues in our evangelistic faith have leapt the chasms of color and creed to lay hands on me.

Final Action Reverses Vote Taken Earlier

WASHINGTON, Feb. 10 (AP)—Bernard Schwartz was fired tonight as chief counsel to a House subcommittee after charging most committee members wanted to whitewash his investigation involving President Eisenhower's chief aide, Sherman Adams, and other high officials.

The subcommittee's action came shortly after 7:30 p.m. after a long day of angry wrangling between Schwartz and House group headed by Rep. Moulder (D-Mo.).

Moulder announced the group's investigation of the Federal Communications Commission and five other regulatory agencies will continue tomorrow—behind closed doors and with Schwartz subpoenaed as a witness.

Three Hours

Shortly before the announcement of his dismissal Schwartz said the committee had "grilled" him for three hours and subjected him to untrue accusations.

One of the latter, he said was that he was a "contemptible liar."

"The majority of the committee was interested in a whitewash," Schwartz, a 34-year-old law professor on leave from New York University, told reporters.

Moulder said the 11-member subcommittee voted that Schwartz's services be ended "immediately as his usefulness to the committee and its investigation has ceased."

Moulder said the vote was 7-4. Earlier in the day, the subcommittee voted 6-5 against firing Schwartz.

Then the group ordered Schwartz to appear for questioning and, under protest, the lawyer did so. He told reporters afterward that at his insistence a transcript of the proceedings would be made public tomorrow.

The committee stayed in session for two hours after hearing Schwartz's testimony and permitting him to leave. Moulder and Chairman Harris (D-Ark) of the full Commerce Committee were barely on speaking terms when the session finally ended.

Moulder said he voted against firing Schwartz. Harris declined to say how he voted but he has been at odds with the chief counsel.

Moulder said he assumed a new counsel will be named. He declined to say whether, having lost his fight to keep Schwartz on the job, he will resign the subcommittee chairmanship.

The subcommittee has announced it will hear further testimony on the FCC tomorrow with Commissioner Richard A. Mack as a witness.

Federal Agencies

Schwartz told reporters he had mentioned to Moulder and other subcommittee members that he had information on intervention by White House aide Adams and other high officials in matters that came before federal regulatory agencies.

He was asked before the announcement of his ouster whether, in view of the controversy over his inquiry, he felt he could do an effective job of investigating.

"If the committee wouldn't constantly shoot me in the back I could carry on," Schwartz replied.

Good Morning!

Beware of the fellow who slaps you on the back; he may be trying to make you cough up.

In case you came in late, Danny Boy and Frosty—both collies and both children's pets—disappeared within about an hour of each other last Wednesday.

homes are only about one-fourth of a mile apart led to the inevitable theory—someone had lifted them.

'Twasn't so, it now appears. Frosty came back home Friday, tired and worn, but otherwise perfectly healthy.

John Robacker and James Gilpin, Dreher Township employees, were plowing the highway when they came upon a family which had been isolated by snow at least since last Wednesday.

Danny Boy had been sleeping under a tree in their front yard since then. Both Robacker and Gilpin had read the story of the missing faun colored dog in The Daily Record. They returned him to the Glenn Keiter family for a joyous reunion with Larry 11; Connie, eight, and Brenda, four.

And dog owners may now sleep peacefully again.

Monroe Part Of Spraying Program

MONROE County is among six in eastern Pennsylvania which the State Agriculture Department plans to spray to prevent spread of the destructive gypsy moth.

Team Operators
Aerial and ground teams will operate in Monroe, Carbon, Luzerne, Pike, Wayne and Schuylkill Counties, beginning in early Spring.

Henning said discovery of the moth last year in a 30-acre area in Luzerne County necessitated the broad spray program.

Ice Causes Problem For Fish

THE RECENT cold weather has placed a thick layer of ice on most farm ponds. This ice helps assure safety for skating, but when combined with the present snow may create a problem to the fish.

During Winter, fish are relatively inactive and require less oxygen than in Summer. But when ice and snow cover the pond, all sources of oxygen are cut off from the fish. Then some may die. This problem occurs most often in ponds that are too shallow, have over populations of fish, or have too many weeds.

Proper Construction

These are factors which should be controlled by proper construction and management of the pond.

If snow and ice cover your pond now, clear the snow from at least a part of the pond. This permits sunlight to penetrate the water where small plants give off enough oxygen to prevent fish kills. Flooding a section of the pond will also help to remove some snow. This will also help sunlight to penetrate to the plants beneath the surface.

For better fishing in years ahead—check your pond now.

Flames Inflict Damages Of $15,000 To House In Bangor

Home Belongs To Assistant Police Chief

BANGOR — Fire was discovered at about 12:15 p.m. yesterday in the home of Assistant Police Chief Harold Harding on Messenger St.

Damage has been estimated at about $15,000. The home was totally destroyed.

Only the shell of the house remains standing. The house has been completely gutted. The roof collapsed and fell into the charred interior of the house.

Harding told reporters that he suspects the fire was caused by an overheated chimney of a hot-air furnace. From there, he speculated, the fire spread to the wiring of the home and through partitions.

Firemen battled the blaze for four hours yesterday. It continued to smolder and break out throughout the afternoon.

Three Companies
All three Bangor companies responded to the alarm. Intense smoke and icy cold temperatures made it difficult to fight the blaze.

Four Bangor firemen were injured slightly in fighting the fire. Among them: Fire Chief Benjamin Albert, injuries to his right leg, when he was hit by a hose; assistant chief Russell Brown, chest injury, when he was hit by a blown gasket from the pump; Russell Reagle, Second Ward fireman, injured right arm when he was hit by falling slate; Chris Schlemmer, engineer of Rescue Fire Co., cuts and bruises, in a fall from the second to the first floor when he broke through burned timbers.

Bangor fire officials said it was the worst home fire the borough has had in 50 years. Officials said they were unable to save anything in the house.

The $15,000 damage estimate does not include the cost of furnishings or other material in the home.

Phillipsburg, N. J., Feb. 10 (AP)—A truck driver who apparently stopped to make repairs was crushed to death today when the truck rolled back on him.

The accident occurred within 200 feet of the toll booth of the busy Phillipsburg-Easton bridge but the body was not discovered for about three hours.

Identification
The victim was tentatively identified from papers in his pocket as Edelbert L. Varling, 50, of Oaklawn, Ill.

Police in the toll booth had noticed the truck parked on the steep approach to the bridge and inspected the vehicle with flashlights but didn't notice Varling. A passing truck saw his body about three hours later.

Police said Varling was east-bound and had stopped the tractor trailer, which he owned, apparently for repairs and was crushed under the wheels when it backed down on him.

Rebel Forces Using War Of Nerves

JAKARTA, Indonesia, Feb. 10 (AP)—Rebel forces on Sumatra are conducting a war of nerves, threatening almost daily to break away and proclaim a counter government to the Central Indonesian regime here on Java.

It could happen any day or after President Sukarno returns from his tour abroad—or it could be bluff.

An increasing stream of reports from antigovernment headquarters in Padang, Central Sumatra, is building up pressure in this capital city. Indonesian and foreign officials and newsmen have been flooded with cloak-and-dagger style tips, rumors and propaganda from Sumatran sources. Deadlines have been given for proclamation of a new government. Some have passed, others are approaching.

Statement
Premier Djuanda went before Parliament this week and issued an uncompromising statement: "The government will take positive steps against any attempt which tries—by issuing so-called proclamations and establishing so-called states and governments—to split this vast island nation.

These outer island forces—largely in Central and South Sumatra and North Celebes—want Djuanda to quit. They are demanding an active anti-Communist government, more power in their local affairs and a bigger share of their foreign trade earnings.

Their military and political leaders are obviously serious in trying to force changes in the Java regime.

KEY TO THE CITY—Col. T. S. Ivey, director of the Fourth Marine Corps Reserve and Recruiting District, received key to the city from Scranton's Mayor James T. Hanlon during reception yesterday. Col. Ivey presented commanding general's trophy to Sixth Marine Truck Co., which won it at Camp Lejeune, N. C., last summer. Looking on is Major Joseph Murray of Cresco, company commander.

Sixth Marine Truck Company Presented Commanding General's Trophy For Labors

THE COMMANDING general's trophy for excellence in reserve unit training during 1957 was presented to the Sixth Marine Truck Co., which has a Stroudsburg platoon, in Scranton last night.

It was presented by Col. T. S. Ivey, director of the Fourth Marine Corps Reserve and Recruiting District, with headquarters in Philadelphia and was accepted by Major Joseph W. Murray of Canadensis, the company commander.

The local unit, with headquarters in Philadelphia and was accepted by Major Joseph W. Murray of Canadensis, the company commander.

It was awarded for general military proficiency, rifle marksmanship and field problems.

The contest is open to all persons in the area served by The Daily Record and Radio Station WVPO except members of the East Stroudsburg Fire Department and their families.

A prize of $25 will be given the winner. The decision of the judges, consisting of the convention committee, will be final and no entries will be returned.

All entries must be postmarked not later than midnight Friday, Feb. 28. There is no limit on the number of entries a contestant may submit.

The only rules governing the contest are that the slogan must in some way incorporate the theme of volunteer fire service and must not contain more than four words.

Entries should be printed or typewritten on a two-cent postal card, with the entrant's name and address, and mailed to Acme Hose Co., 36 Spangenberg Ave., East Stroudsburg.

Committee Finds Reds Infiltrating

WASHINGTON, Feb. 10 (AP)—The House Committee on Un-American Activities said today its hearings last year established that the Communist party has been able to infiltrate deeper into vital U. S. industries.

The committee's annual report said the Reds accomplished this "despite setbacks" to party finances and nominal membership.

"The degree of success which the Communist party achieves has no direct relationship to the size of the party itself," the committee said.

The report said the committee hearings "highlighted the growing use of the Communist technique of colonization of industry by small cadres of highly trained, disciplined party members."

Factory Jobs
It said the colonizers seek unskilled factory jobs where they can carry out the assignments of the Communist party, "which include penetration of the union, indoctrination of the union membership, and fellow employees where it serves the interest of the party, and supplying industrial information or committing espionage."

The report included summaries of hearings held in five cities: New Orleans, La., last February; New Haven, Conn., last February; Baltimore, Md., last May; San Francisco, Calif., last June, and Buffalo, N. Y., last October.

The committee said the Buffalo hearings "furnished additional evidence of Communist tactics in penetrating industry."

"This evidence showed clearly the need for additional security legislation, particularly provisions dealing with the falsification of social security cards by Communist party members," the report said.

GOP Leaders Air Prospects For 1958

PHILADELPHIA, Feb. 10 (AP)—Southeastern Pennsylvania Republican leaders met privately for five hours in a hotel suite today to discuss the prospects of more than 15 possible candidates for governor and four for U. S. senator. They adjourned without announcing a decision or eliminating anyone.

"We arrived at no agreement," said State GOP Chairman George I. Bloom. "We discussed everyone and eliminated no one."

But Bloom expressed the hope that today's meeting, plus five others scheduled in the next seven days, "will eliminate a Republican contest in the primary."

"I think this meeting worked toward that goal," he added.

Throughout State
Bloom has been holding these meetings of smaller and larger groups throughout the state since last September for the purpose of "getting the consensus of Republican thinking."

Time now is short for a primary battle is to be avoided. The first day to circulate nominating petitions is Feb. 25, and the closing date is March 17—just five weeks away.

The November election campaign promises to be a vigorous one with the Republicans determined to win back the State House and the Democrats equally eager to retain the governorship and capture the presently-held GOP Senate.

Under state law Democratic Gov. Leader cannot succeed himself, and U. S. Sen. Edward Martin has decided to retire after completing his second six-year term. Thus both top spots are open for both parties to fill in the spring primary.

Bloom said another meeting of Republican leaders will be held Thursday in Franklin. On Friday Bloom will confer with Republicans at Huntingdon, Saturday at Pittsburgh, Monday at Williamsport and Tuesday, Feb. 18 at Allentown.

"After that," he said, "there will be another meeting that will be representative of the entire state."

Public's Convenience Must Dictate Course

Stroudsburg Council was requested last week to re-install the 10 parking meters which state highway safety and traffic engineers had ordered removed more than a year ago on Main St., just west of the busy Seventh St. intersection.

Council is to be commended for refusing to act hastily in the matter. Furthermore, we feel, Council President Edward R. Lawson made a wise decision when he named all members of council to a committee to investigate the advisability of replacing the meters.

Burgess Edward A. Doran formally presented the request, following up a similar plea made to council last year by Willard Quick, who owns a restaurant and bar near the intersection.

The burgess remarked that state highway engineers have no objection to using the spaces for parking.

Apparently caught by surprise by that statement, President Lawson replied in a "What goes on here?" vein. He recalled it was the Highways Department which had requested in the first place that the meters be removed.

By eliminating angle parking for a reasonable distance on Main St., the state engineers said at the time, two lanes of the heavily-traveled highway would be open for the movement of traffic. One would be for through traffic and left turns and the second for vehicles turning right on Seventh St. on both the red and the green signals.

Council was forced to accept the state's proposal or face the costly alternative of erecting traffic light standards at the four corners of the intersection to replace the overhead signal light.

It chose the former plan and removed the meters as requested by the state. The idea has proved highly successful under all conditions, especially during the peak travel periods when traffic jams are ordinarily at their worst.

The Daily Record feels strongly, therefore, that the present practice should be continued as long as traffic remains heavy at this, the busiest intersection in the entire county.

Only after the Thruway is built to take through traffic off the main streets will the need for two open lanes cease to exist. Then—and only then—should the meters be replaced.

Council, moreover, can hardly agree to replacement of the meters at Seventh and Main Sts. without taking similar action at Fifth and Main Sts., where a number of meters were removed also at the request of state highway engineers.

There are a number of business establishments which would benefit by this change. To date we are unaware of one official request to replace these meters.

Parking meters help business and provide a substantial revenue for the borough. It's obvious, then, that their use in a judicious manner should be encouraged.

We doubt that anyone who has driven the length of Main St. in ordinary traffic, let alone on busy weekends and holidays, can conscientiously desire a return to the days when meters were in place at both intersections.

Traffic tie-ups are frequent enough under present conditions. They would be much worse if the meters are re-installed.

What A Road!

To those accustomed to thinking of four- and six-lane expressways, the new one to stretch from the vicinity of Delaware Water Gap 72 miles across New Jersey to the George Washington Bridge will be an eye-opener.

It is to have eight lanes, and the dividing strip will be so arranged that it can be used later, if desired, for high speed mass transit facilities. The cost will be about $387,000,000, or more than $5,000,000 a mile. The high cost is largely due to the route, which will pass through densely populated areas.

This is the largest undertaking in New Jersey under the new road building program, and seems likely to be one of the largest in any part of the country. The reason, of course, is that only a few metropolitan areas have the density of population which is found in the north Jersey area which the route traverses.

It promises to be something of a model of how to handle heavy metropolitan traffic, but if it proves adequate for even 20 years it will be a tribute to the foresight of the planners.

The Pennsylvania Story

Dozen Discrepancies

(Second of a series of two)

Harrisburg — With Pennsylvania's taxpayers facing the prospect of being mugged out of a cool half-million dollars as a result of highway cinder purchase skulduggery there are several reasons for this unhappy circumstance.

In the first place, until the Auditor General recently demanded them, cinder delivery slips were deadheaded in the district offices of the State Department of Highways.

This in itself provided considerable latitude on the local or district level, with virtually no counter-checks from headquarters here in Harrisburg.

It had been the practice to merely forward to the State Auditor General a loose set of unsubstantiated figures on a pay or reimbursement requisition form.

However several months ago when the Auditor General's Department became suspicious, the request was made to the Department of Highways that the material delivery tickets be attached to the vouchers for substantiation.

This is now being done but here are a dozen points listed by state auditors showing discrepancies that have been found in close scrutiny of these delivery tickets:

1. Lack of proper signatures.

2. Overcharge on vendors delivery ticket.

3. Weight of truck listed incorrectly.

4. Source of pickup of material does not agree with vendor's bid proposal.

5. Errors in weight slips.

6. Figures not legible.

7. No gross weight shown on weight slip.

8. No weight of truck shown on weight slip (to check net weight).

9. No delivery tickets for invoices.

10. Freight bills attached that belong to another invoice.

11. Number of trips or loads added incorrectly.

12. Additions incorrect on material delivery records.

Examples (plural not singular) of each one of these points have been seen personally by this reporter.

There are also such absurdities, again according to the material delivery tickets turned in, as a seven and one-half ton truck hauling 20 tons of cinders — an impossibility.

Or there is the repeated case of trucks hauling a listed 76,500 pounds of cinders — when the legal limit on Pennsylvania highways, including three per cent overload, is only 61,800 pounds.

This certification in itself provides a signed indictment of the hauler — in theory at least offering State Police the opening to pick up overweight trucks without even having to bother with weigh scales!

(One set of delivery tickets shows that 4400 tons of cinders were delivered in 112 truck loads — or an "average" of over 79,000 pounds per load.)

Or there is the case of the ambitious truck driver who delivered 10,559 tons of cinders on one day alone — according to the delivery tickets.

A watchdogging independent agency such as the Auditor General may be embarrassing to any administration — but it is far from that for Pennsylvania's taxpayers.

President's Stand

President Eisenhower is standing firm on the principle that the United States will choose its own Secretary of State and will choose anyone it pleases, whether Krushchev likes it or not. This colloquy occurred at the President's press conference.

"John Seale of the Associated Press — Mr. President, in his latest letter to you, Premier Bulganin opposed a foreign ministers' conference because, as he put it, of the biased position of certain possible participants. What do you think of this remark, sir?"

"A—Well, I rather thought he must have been talking about Gromyko."

It is, of course, impudent for Soviet Russia or any other country to attempt to influence a government against one of its own officials, but impudence is a characteristic of the Krushchev regime. Therefore, one must expect anything at all. The American people, however, will take a new look at John Foster Dulles.

They will view him with considerable pride because when the Russians are displeased with an American negotiator, it means that that man has stood firm for the United States, has refused to today and grovel and crawl before the Kremlin masters who are so puffed up with success that they treat all other peoples as though they too had been conquered.

The United States will pick its own Secretary of State and it is to be hoped that he will always be a tough negotiator who, while polite to all, will take umbrage from none. It would seem, from the record, that John Foster Dulles is just this type of man. There are several who want his job, but thus far President Eisenhower has resisted their invitations to be appointed.

It reminds one of Chiang Kai-shek's extremely valuable book, "Soviet Russia in China," in which he reaches this conclusion:

"As I look back on those years of 'peaceful coexistence,' I become more convinced than ever before that neutralism is as dangerous as Communism itself. Therefore, even at the risk of repeating myself, I should stress again this question of neutralism."

The absurdity of it is too obvious to belabor. We need not send a negotiator into a conference with the Russians a man who will be afraid of Krushchev, who will crawl before him as though he were an Iron. That is where all our troubles came from.

We acted soft from 1942 until 1945 and then we became coldly polite. It took the American Government much longer than it took the Americans to discover that the Russians were not concerned with Hoyle as much as they were with getting ahead.

John Foster Dulles is the first American Secretary of State since the Bolshevik Revolution who is dealing with the Russians correctly — and naturally, they are squealing.

"Neutralism is based on the assumption that a free democratic country can coexist with a Communist state in peace and prosperity. My experience with Communism has taught me that it is only when the Communists are in need of a respite in which to consolidate their gains or to prepare for their next move that they tolerate and would sometimes even encourage the existence of such a state of mind..."

A rising empire cannot afford the luxury of propriety and the Russians make no attempt at it. One of the difficulties of dealing with them is that they avoid the rule of law and devote themselves to the rule of reason, which is not the same thing at all. The rule of reason can be twisted to serve any purpose.

Therefore, although it may be neither good international law nor good manners for them to instruct President Eisenhower as to whom he shall appoint as his Secretary of State, it is nonetheless suitable to their present purposes to oppose a foreign ministers' conference on the improper grounds that they dislike our Secretary of State, John Foster Dulles.

Whom would they prefer as the American Secretary of State? Would they like us to appoint Harold Stassen or perhaps Henry Cabot Lodge, Jr.? Would they consider Senator Mike Mansfield? Do they like one from the North or from the South?

Perhaps the aged and courtly Senator Green of Rhode Island would be pleasing, or perhaps Miss Elsa Maxwell who knows Gromyko? Shall we ask Nikita Krushchev to make his choice and how about the Secretary of Defense, shall we ask about that, too?

The absurdity of it is too obvious to belabor. We need not send a negotiator into a conference with the Russians a man who will be afraid of Krushchev, who will crawl before him as though he were an Iron. That is where all our troubles came from.

We acted soft from 1942 until 1945 and then we became coldly polite. It took the American Government much longer than it took the Americans to discover that the Russians were not concerned with Hoyle as much as they were with getting ahead.

Flu: Biological Warfare

Washington, Feb. 10 — The still-rampant Asian flu epidemic is being put to use for national defense purposes — after a fashion.

It is being carefully studied as an "approximation of biological warfare."

From that aspect, military authorities and the Public Health Service are compiling extensive data on how this highly contagious disease has affected vital elements of the country's defenses; such as industries, communications, population centers, and the armed services.

This unusual survey has already produced significant information:

So far, the Asian flu epidemic has afflicted an estimated 40,000,000 in the U.S. since last Fall.

Curiously, in striking contrast, Russia is one of the lightest hit countries in the world by this malady.

During the recent Turkish-Syrian war crisis, upwards of one-fourth of the crews of the Sixth U.S. Fleet were immobilized by this flu.

Very little is definitely known about Soviet developments in biological warfare, but U.S. experts give the Reds the same capabilities in these fearsome weapons as this country.

In the last few years, U.S. research has scored a number of major advances in this field, but so far they are not operational because of lack of funds.

This point is being vigorously stressed by Major General William Cressy, chief chemical officer of the Army.

Following a series of conferences with Cressy, leaders of the Senate and House appropriations committees were so impressed by his grim warning of the country's virtual unpreparedness in biological warfare, that they directed him to submit an emergency program for consideration at this session.

If Cressy's plans are approved, several hundred million dollars would be spent by the Army over a period of years for biological warfare defenses and facilities.

Deadly Germs — In his talks with the congressional leaders, General Cressy pointed out two dread factors in biological warfare:

The development of long-range ballistic missiles and space satellites, which immensely extend the scope of chemical and bacteriological weapons.

These arms now include not only germs and lethal chemicals, but radiological agents.

Graphically illustrative of the fearful effectiveness of biological weapons, General Cressy cited the results of recent secret tests conducted jointly by the U.S. and Canada.

In one experiment, all animal life and vegetation were destroyed in an area in a matter of minutes.

Another test left the animal life sick and helpless for weeks.

through the ordeal. It's just too much trouble."

Talked to Don Murray, who just returned from a two-week trip to Sardinia to promote the plan to eventually get Europe's 80,000 displaced persons out of the camps and into a self-supporting way of life. Don says that eight families heads now are living on the 140 acres that were bought to establish a pilot community in which the displaced persons can become useful workers in the lands where they have found asylum.

"Later," he says, "we hope to have these men joined by their families. The ultimate outcome will be to divide the land into parcels and give one to each family."

The extensive spread of air-conditioning and food processing. General Cressy emphasized, lend themselves especially to biological warfare. Saboteurs could wreak immense havoc by utilizing these widely-popular modern facilities for destructive purposes.

Senate Duel — Their colleagues are watching with lively interest a growing feud between Senator Robert Kerr (D., Okla.), noted for his razor-sharp tongue, and Senator Frank Lausche (D.O.), former Governor of Ohio, who votes as often with the GOP as with his own party.

They tangled the other day over a water resources measure, which Kerr strongly favored and Lausche as vigorously opposed.

The Oklahoman argued against the bill on his favorite complaint; that it would mean increased government spending. Kerr strenuously denied that. Following are highlights of their caustic wrangling:

Lausche: "When the bill came before the Senate, it involved expenditures of $1,500,000,000."

Kerr: "The Senator is mistaken. The bill did not involve the expenditure of a single dollar. It was not an appropriation bill."

Lausche: "The Senator may make the best of that point, but he cannot change the substance of what we're talking about. That substance will not be changed by the Senator from Oklahoma."

Kerr: "For once, I am convinced of the accuracy of the Senator's statement."

Lausche: "May I ask the Senator what amount of projects relate to his state?"

Kerr: "Not one dollar."

Lausche: "As I recall, it is a rather substantial amount."

Kerr: "Let me say to the Senator that if a full and comprehensive knowledge of the economic feasibility of the projects in the bill were to dawn upon him at this moment, I would fear the result of the impact of the truth on the Senator. I'm afraid it would be virtually devastating."

That ended the argument. Shortly thereafter, the Senate overwhelmingly sided with Kerr and passed the bill.

Good Evening Ladies!

Wives Never Forget

By Ken Duvall

Fourteen years ago, one of my office colleagues has been telling me, his wife handed him a wad of money and instructed him to pay the telephone and gas bills.

Well, before he could get to those offices, he ran afoul of some low characters in the composing room who, on their lunch hour, were kneeling in a devout attitude behind a linotype machine and who invited him to join them in their devotions.

When he finally arose, he was as clean of cash as a newborn babe and, of course, had to go home and confess this morbid fact to his wife. Now, every time she gives him so much as a nickel the admonition to stay out of the composing room and reminds him of what happened to the telephone and gas money fourteen years ago. Don't wives, he asks, ever forget these things?

No, my boy, they do not. A similar tragedy struck me just seventeen years ago this May. While other people look forward to May, the fairest of the months because it heralds the end of winter and the coming of lovely blossoms, the birds, the bees and other flora and fauna, to me it is a period of sackcloth and ashes.

That is because the Kentucky Derby is run at that time.

It used to be that, come May 1, you could stick me with a knife and I'd bleed mint juleps, but now you'd draw only blood. I was so certain, in May, 1941, that Porter's Cap would prove his superior breeding that I was willing to make a substantial contribution to the fund set aside by Churchill Downs for research and the improvement of honeymoon aboard Bob's boat.

Shirley Jones' husband Jack Cassidy, has signed for a role in the Broadway musical version of "Sunset Boulevard." Shirley has finished her role in U-I's "Never Steal Anything Small." Her parents are coming out from Pittsburgh to visit her. Then she'll go east to be with Jack until a picture calls her back to Hollywood.

Rita Hayworth and Jim Hill already have rented a Beverly Hills home to live in after they return from their European honeymoon.

It's going to be close but Jeff Chandler tells me he is going to move heaven and earth to finish his European picture, "The Extra Edge," and be back here for the first day of baseball.

"It may not be very tactful," he says, "but I want to see my Giants beat the L.A. Dodgers."

Following that emergency appendectomy, Burt Lancaster never let his father know they were in the same hospital. His dad had a heart condition and Burt didn't want to worry him. Each day, he put on street clothes and paid a visit to his father's room.

Moon Trip Passenger Suggested

by Jim Riley

I was the happy recipient of a letter from one of the top scientific minds in Monroe County on a recent date.

This man is well known throughout the area and is almost a household word in virtually every spot in the world, especially the United States and Ireland.

Our friend would like very much if his name would remain a secret, as he wouldn't want his current experiments to be hindered by interruptions from his millions of admirers.

One of the chief programs under the direction of our friendly neighbor is the long awaited trip to the moon.

Our scientific genius doesn't have any rockets, satellites, missiles or any type equipment needed for the lengthy trip.

But, he does have a passenger.

Our gift to the scientific world has placed the name of Walter Fosse, Pocono Mountains Inn, in nomination for the coveted position.

Our scientist announced that he is making arrangements to have post-card stamp awaiting Walter on his arrival on the moon.

Now, just what does he mean?

Judge Fred Davis is back in good health and in the middle of another season of court this week.

The Judge won a recent battle with flu.

Russ Staples, East Stroudsburg, is an authority on Hollywood personalities and movie people of all nations.

He is a real expert at pronouncing names of the various Italian actresses.

"Hinky" Hughes, 19 N. Fifth St., Stroudsburg, is recovering from an attack of flu.

"Hinky" and the Mrs. celebrated their 35th wedding anniversary last week.

Pete Nasse, Delaware Water Gap, really knows how to handle this deep snow.

When last visible, he and his powerful deep were sitting in the middle of a snow drift.

Ontwood Lodge, located in the Swiftwater-Mount Pocono area, will be under new ownership next Summer.

It was owned by Edna S. Ruess.

Just Between Us —

—By Bobby Westbrook

Chicken Little was one of my childhood's favorite characters. You remember, pecking away in the pea patch, he was hit on the head by a pea and went squawking off that "the Sky is falling, and a piece of it hit me on the head" with Turkey-lurkey, Henny-penny and all the rest of them joining in the uproar.

Well, that's what the office sounded like last night with all the sky-watchers in Monroe County calling up to tell us about "That peculiar light in the sky."

It got so you answered the phone with a crisp, "Northern lights!" without even asking what for. But the peculiar thing was that the more the calls came in, the more I got to wondering if it really was northern lights.

Me and Chicken Little! However, after about three shivering trips outside to check on those lights, I was so cold that the Martians could have landed and welcome.

Matter of fact after trudging up and down the driveway over snow so cold it squeaks underfoot and so drifted deep that it will be there until June, I would welcome even Martians as company around our house.

I'd better not mention it, though, or it just might happen. The very day we carried the story about Dr. Abrahamson's warning to the Y-Graduate about the danger of small children poisoning themselves, he was pumping the contents of a medicine chest out of one small child's stomach.

Generally speaking, however, we could stand repeats on today's stories: the heartwarming account of Mrs. Emma Smith's extra-curricular activities, the heartwarming smiles on the Brownies. With warm hearts, maybe being cold everywhere else isn't so important.

Brownies Making Valentines

Newfoundland — Preparations for Valentine's Day will get under way when the brownies meet at Greene-Dreher-Sterling Joint School next week, and the little girls will make their own valentines for the event. Also scheduled for the next meeting is a new game, "Crossing the Ice."

Inger Madsen, Penny Gilpin and Pamela Eggert participated in the flag ceremony this week. The girls viewed a picture of the Girl Scout Chalet in Switzerland described recently by Pamela Shenk, who had visited it. They worked on their first aid kits, with Donna Stevens, troop nurse, inspecting the contents. A quiz on Girl Scout history was given by Peggy Wholfart.

The brownies are participating in the sale of Girl Scout cookies, and each girl was given seven boxes to sell. Cookie chairman Betty Butler and Josephine Woltjen explained "scoutmanship" to the little girls.

Animal and shoe relays highlighted this week's meeting under the direction of Mrs. Ethel Wohlfart and Lucille Ketz.

HEARTFELT APPRECIATION for an outstanding teacher was expressed yesterday with the presentation of the 1958 award to a Monroe County teacher to Mrs. Emma K. Smith, a teacher in the Eldred Twp. ## Teacher's Humanitarian Interest Wins Mrs. Smith County's 1958 'Oscar'

For Mrs. Emma Smith, Monroe County's outstanding teacher for 1958, yesterday received the accolade of the Woman's Club of the Stroudsburgs and an engraved silver bowl at the meeting at the Stroud Community House.

"For her many years of faithful service, for her interest in the community, for her humanitarian attitude towards children, in addition to her devoted and dedicated work of teaching them the 3 R's, and for her many acts performed beyond the call of duty—" read the nomination presented in her behalf by the secretary of the Eldred Twp. School Board.

Mrs. Smith was chosen by a county-wide panel of judges from many other nominations of other outstanding teachers of the community. Mrs. Samuel O. Wells, Ill, in making the presentation listed some of the highlights of the teaching career which won her the "Oscar."

Mrs. Smith began her teaching career in 1937 in a one-room school in Ross and Eldred Townships. There she taught approximately 36 pupils in grades one through 8. She carried all the water for the school from her home and performed all of the janitorial duties including caring for the fires, sweeping and cleaning.

Prepared Lunches, Too
During the depression years of the late 30's, she secured surplus commodity foods and cooked and prepared lunches at home which she took to school and served.

All holidays were celebrated with special festivities. Through her efforts a flag pole was secured on the school property. Since the erection of the new consolidated school in Eldred Township in 1953, Mrs. Smith has taught the first and second grades there. In addition to teaching, she has been musical director and accompanist at the school.

Home Teaching
Upon many occasions when children have been absent, Mrs. Smith has visited them at home and helped with their lessons. One year, she visited a child stricken with rheumatic fever three times a week at home to bring his school work up to date.

Mrs. Smith is active in her church and its organizations and serves as choir director and accompanist as well as a Sunday School teacher. She is also active in community affairs and assists in any way she can.

The "Oscar" program is sponsored by the Woman's Club, with Mrs. Van D. Yetter, educational chairman in charge, not only to pay tribute to an outstanding teacher but to stress appreciation for the role which all good teachers play in American life. It was emphasized.

Program On Voices
Miss Jane Blockberger of the Bell Telephone Co. was the speaker for the program on "Your Voice and You". Recordings of common telephone "types" were played and the club members had a chance to record their own voices which were then played back.

The meeting opened with a Valentine tea with Mrs. Allen Keiper as chairman of the hospitality committee. Red hearts held white tapers, and a pierced heart formed the centerpiece. Mrs. Franklin Smith poured.

At the business meeting members were invited to hear the talk by Dr. Robert Glover, eminent heart specialist, at the Penn-Stroud Hotel on this Thursday at 8:15. Ten dollars was voted to the Heart Drive.

Sherry Lee Kuhn

These days if you wish to get in with the "right" people, you must head for the Valentine racks. There you meet everyone worth meeting . . . at one time or another. Shorty Widmer, having been after me several days to write a Valentine column, on Saturday morning I meandered down to the Arcade, pushed my way through the mob, and began reading verses on all the cards that appealed to me. Since almost anything in a Valentine appeals to me, and since we have a wonderful supply, this took a bit of doing. It was so quiet around the rack, one might almost have been in the public library. When people did speak to one another it was to say, "Read this . . . isn't it clever?" or "Look, Elsie—wouldn't this be just the thing to send Harry?"

As a matter of fact there are cards just perfect to send Tom and Dick also. The more verses I read, the more convinced I was that there is a card that's particularly apropos to everyone whom I know, and possibly everyone whom you know. One Valentine, for instance, is just made for a fellow or girl to send to the suitor who appears stalled on the rocky road to marriage. "What are you waiting for, Valentine?" it demands bluntly. Inside, where there is a beautiful spangled and sequined tree, it adds, "Christmas?" I know one gal who has tentatively set a "between Christmas and New Year's wedding date," who has chosen this particular Valentine for the bridegroom-to-be.

Another Valentine that would be perfect to send a fellow who can't decide between two fair ladies, or to a girl who can't choose between two gentlemen, has an amusing contemporary design and pointedly wants to know, "What's the matter—still on the fence?"

There are Valentines that open to reveal saucy 3-dimensional rabbits, or dogs, or pussy cats, wiggling their ears, extending eager noses, or sticking out their tongues. Another contemporary card has a discreetly naughty fan dancer, who wiggles a mischievous leg and urges you to have fun while you still Can-Can.

There are other cards too . . . many of them deliciously sentimental. Some have satin hearts, frills of lace, and verses dribbling delightful sentiment. Any really feminine woman would adore these . . . but according to my horoscope, on the 14th of February I am to receive a comic Valentine which I will treasure!

While looking over the rack, Mrs. Clifford Heller showed me a few she had selected for her grandchildren. For a boy who loves trains she had found one with a little train that revolves. For another, a farm complete with animals that can be placed here and there in the meadow. For a girl, one with paper dolls.

I counted ten styles of Valentines for Secret Pals, and several designed for the ill, expressing both love and the wish for a speedy recovery. While I was standing there, Hazel Landreth walked up to me and said, "Here's the one the men love." It is a contemporary, with black and white figures . . . and it shows a re- "It's Valentine's Day," he calls sentimentally. But markedly ugly man coming in the front door beaming, turn the page and inside it adds, "What's for supper?"

Oh well, that TOO is love!

ASKS COOPERATION—Donald Gage of the Acme Hose Co., East Stroudsburg, is shown yesterday as he asked cooperation of the Pocono Mountains Chamber of Commerce in the Four-County Firemen's Convention to be held here this Spring. Listening to Gage are Arthur Schiebel (left), president of Trumatic Machine and Tool Co., Inc., host for the chamber meeting, and Walter Peeney, a past chamber president.

Report On Industries At Chamber Luncheon

By Don Allen

M. F. CROWE, president of the Pocono Mountains Chamber of Commerce, yesterday reported on progress in bringing new industry to the Stroudsburg area at a Chamber luncheon at the plant of Trumatic Machine and Tool Co., Inc.

Crowe said an Ohio firm is currently searching the title before closing a deal to purchase a lot from the Delaware, Lackawanna and Western Railroad.

Monroe County Industries, Inc., officials are currently negotiating with East Stroudsburg Municipal Authority relative to water for the proposed plant.

Crowe said the Stroudsburg Municipal Authority, which previously said it could supply sufficient pressure to the plant, is now unable to do so.

All papers relative to moving of a diesel plant to the former Christmas plot in the W. Main St. area have been completed, Crowe said. Plant plans are expected shortly.

A decision by a New Jersey manufacturer on the other portion of the Christmas property is expected after Feb. 17. The company is also considering a site near Delaware Water Gap.

A Springfield, Ill., manufacturer of hair pins and other cosmetics is also considering the Christmas tract, according to Crowe.

He described the firm as the second largest in the country in its field, with a business of $2,000,000 last year, and said Monroe County Industries is surveying other area factory sites in case the New Jersey firm decides on the W. Main St. location.

An aluminum company with four plants in New Jersey is also considering locating in the area, Crowe said, and desires to consolidate its operations into one plant. Talks with the firm are continuing.

In other action during the meeting, the Chamber:

Endorsed an expansion program for Mount Pocono Airport and will urge borough councils, county commissioners and township officials to pledge their support of the plans.

Rep. Hanford S. Cleveland said at the meeting that Monroe County stands to lose $300,000 available for the airport unless $16,000 can be raised at the local level in the near future.

Authorized payment out of Chamber funds for any deficit in what Crowe termed the "costly process" of drawing up documents for the Pennsylvania Industrial Development Authority to bring new industry here.

Authorized officers of the Chamber to form a new industrial group, to be known as Pocono Mountains Industries, Inc., "if necessary."

Crowe pointed out that Mon-

Stock Market Struck By Sharp Decline

NEW YORK, Feb. 10 (AP)—The stock market declined sharply today, equalling Friday's fall. Trading was slow.

Another estimated $1,600,000,000 was shown from the quoted value of stocks listed on the New York Stock Exchange, based on the fall in The Associated Press average.

Volume sank to 1,900,000 shares compared with 2,220,000 Friday and was the smallest since Jan. 13. The 1,125 issues traded were the fewest since Jan. 14.

Average

The AP average of 60 stocks dropped $1.30 with the industrials down $2.10, the rails down $1.20 and the utilities off 10 cents.

Declines totaled 591 and advances 297. New 1957-58 highs were 18 and new lows 6.

Eight of the 15 most active stocks declined, five rose and two were unchanged.

Bethlehem, up  $\frac{1}{4}$  at 39 $\frac{1}{2}$ , and Paramount Pictures, off  $\frac{1}{4}$  at 36 $\frac{1}{2}$ , were among the most active.

Lorillard rose  $\frac{1}{4}$  and also was among the most active. General Dynamics was active and unchanged.

Among the losers were Allied Chemical  $\frac{1}{4}$ , Union Carbide  $\frac{1}{4}$ , Republic Steel  $\frac{1}{4}$ , Chrysler  $\frac{1}{4}$ , Douglas Aircraft  $\frac{1}{4}$ , duPont  $\frac{1}{4}$ , General Electric  $\frac{1}{4}$ , and Johns-Manville  $\frac{1}{4}$ .

American Stock Exchange prices were generally lower on turn-over of 570,000 shares compared with 610,000 Friday. Corporate bonds rose in below average trading. U.S. Government bonds rose irregularly in over the counter dealings.

Military Police Return Suspect

MILITARY POLICE yesterday returned to Philadelphia with Donald Gordon, 20, of 94 N. Courtland St., East Stroudsburg, who had been held in Monroe County Jail.

Gordon was arrested Friday by East Stroudsburg police. He was being held as absent without official leave from Fort Ord, Calif.

Charles Bruch Directing Production

CHARLES BRUCH, Stroudsburg, is directing a new translation of Jean Baptiste Moliere's "The Bourgeois Gentleman."

The new adaptation is being produced in Washington, D. C., by Theater Lobby. The work is translated by Forrester Maphis.

Bruch's production of the Moliere plays opens a four-week-end run Feb. 21 in the playhouse at 17 St. Matthew's Court, behind St. Matthew's Cathedral. Performances are at 8:45 p.m. Fridays and Saturdays and at 7 on Sundays.

First Assignment

Bruch, according to Theatre Lobby spokesmen, brings to this, his first assignment for the group, a background of local (Washington) experience which includes directorial assignments on plays for the Chancel Drama Cycle of the Washington Episcopal Churches.

He is staging the play in the classical manner with a minimum of sets and properties, relying instead on period costumes and the actors' technique.

Bruch will be remembered in Stroudsburg for his production of "Christ in the Concrete City," an allegorical study of Christ's passion restated in terms of the denials in everyday life among human beings. It was presented a year ago at the Episcopal Church in Stroudsburg. Bruch is a resident of 341 Main St. in this borough. He is employed in the office of Rep. Francis E. Walter.

Seven Post Bond, Waive Hearings Charges Of Conspiring To Defraud State

HARRISBURG, Feb. 10 (AP)—Seven men have posted bond and waived hearings on charges of conspiring to defraud the state Highways Department of $52,000 in the sale of cinders for use in Westmoreland and Armstrong Counties.

Alderman J. L. Madden, Harrisburg, said the seven men were arrested last Saturday and by waiving hearings would have their cases brought before a Dauphin County Grand Jury.

Dist. Atty. Huette F. Dowling said he would propose indictments at the next session of Criminal Court starting March 17.

Those who posted bail on the conspiracy and false pretenses charges were:

Frank J. Petrosky, Greensburg, charged with 11 counts of conspiracy and seven counts of false pretenses, $10,000.

Patrick J. McShane, Scottsdale, former highways maintenance superintendent in Westmoreland County, one count of conspiracy, $5,000.

Roland J. Sell, Scottsdale, one false pretense, one conspiracy, $1,000.

Earl J. Broker, Irwin, three false pretenses and two conspiracy, $1,000.

Charles E. Falt, Greensburg, two conspiracy and two false pretenses, $1,000.

Glenn F. Bowser, Templeton, Armstrong County, one conspiracy and three false pretenses, $1,000.

Petrosky, a brother of Democratic Rep. Anthony J. Petrosky, was listed as sole owner of the Salem Supply Co. which sold cinders to the state in the two counties.

All except Petrosky were formerly employed by the Highways Department.

Hoad Uses Control As Big Weapon

NEW YORK, Feb. 10 (AP)—The secret of Lew Hoad's tennis success, by his own reckoning, is control-control of his game and his emotions.

"I haven't had a flareup since I turned pro," said the 23-year-old former Australian Davis Cup star whose career as an amateur was marked by periodic petulance and devil-may-care attitudes.

"I don't let little things bother me any more. I don't worry about the umpire and linesmen. I just go out there and play the best tennis I can."

Hoad, who dropped 11 of his first 20 pro starts, flew into New York today to resume his 100-match series with pro king Pancho Gonzales, whom he leads 9-6. They meet Wednesday night at Madison Square Garden.

Conference

The blond Australian parried questions at a midtown press conference.

How about indoor conditions, lighting, court surface, etc.

"It's more dependable than grass, but I find it hard to move on canvas. I like to slide on shots but I catch on canvas."

Is Gonzales the best player he ever faced?

"Yes, he is. Pancho has the strongest, all-around game I have played against."

Does he think he will win the series with Gonzales?

"I won't say that, but I'll give him a go."

Campanella In 'Good Spirits'

GLEN COVE, N. Y., Feb. 10 (AP)—Roy Campanella was reported in "good spirits" and in satisfactory condition today but there still is no improvement in the paralysis of his lower limbs.

The Glen Cove Hospital said the Dodger catcher, who suffered a broken neck in an automobile accident Jan. 28, has satisfactory temperature and is eating and resting well, but no change has been noted in his sense of feeling from the chest down.

Robinson In Fold

CINCINNATI, Feb. 10 (AP)—Frankie Robinson, 22, National League sophomore of 1957, today signed his 1958 contract with Cincinnati.

Bowling Clinic

By BILLY SIXTY

How To Play A "Run" Alley THERE ARE three ways to meet a "run" condition, depending on your type of delivery. (An alley "runs" when the ball breaks sharply from right to left.)

With a wide hook, for instance, take your stance well to the inside on the approach, approximately alley center. From that position you have room to allow for any amount of alley run. Make the 3-pint your full-hit target and let the help of alley take the ball into the (1-3 pin gap) pocket.

If you find that control comes hard with the inside "out-and-in" delivery, bowl from your normal position to release the ball 10 to 12 inches from the right hand gutter and try to release the strike line with an exaggerated follow-through. Finish with a stretching reach.

Travels Farther

In that way the ball travels farther down the alley in rotating motion before it takes to revolving inward—to the left. The longer finish is what most stars use because it's easier to do and lends itself best to constant, controlled action.

Good News For Milwaukee

NEW YORK, Feb. 10 (AP)—Glowing report from Puerto Rico about the work of Juan Pizarro, Gerry Neuson and Humbert Robinson are calculated to inspire added respect for Milwaukee's pitching staff.

With Bob Rush already available to back up Warren Spahn, Lew Burdette and Bob Buhl, the development of an added starter from the Winter League could make the Braves heavy favorites to repeat in the National League.

Pizarro probably has the best chance of blossoming into a new phenom. At the age of 19 he burned up the South Atlantic League with Jacksonville in 1956.

"The fastest I've seen since Hossie Feller," observed Rollie Hembsley, veteran catcher who was managing in the league that year.

"He could be as great as Warren Spahn," said Bill Terry, then the league president.

Space Travel Depends On Gravity's Pull

CAMBRIDGE, Mass., Feb. 10 (AP)—Maybe space travelers wouldn't do so well on a larger planet, where the pull of gravity is greater, if scientific studies on mice—disclosed today—hold true for human beings.

American biophysicists, already exploring the stresses to which advancing technology may subject living tissues, reported to the second annual meeting of a new organization of scientists—the Biophysical Society. It covers fields ranging from biology and medicine to chemistry and physics.

One of the investigators, Dr. Charles C. Wunder of the Iowa State University college of medicine, found that young mice can withstand—up to eight days—increased gravity equal to 3½ times the earth's gravitational pull. But they stopped—or almost stopped—growing simultaneously with a loss of appetite for food.

Slightly greater gravities proved fatal to the mice after exposures of only an hour.

The increased gravity effect was created by placing white mice in a centrifuge—a rotating mechanism which increases the apparent weight of objects in it through centrifugal force.

Kaiser's Son Offered Life For Germans

LONDON, Feb. 10 (AP)—The Kaiser's eldest son wrote King George VI of Britain after World War I offering himself as a hostage to save 900 Germans wanted as war criminals.

The story out of the past was disclosed today in a volume of hitherto secret documents released by the British Foreign Office covering the years 1919-1939.

Crown Prince Wilhelm made his offer in a personal letter to King George from neutral Holland where the Kaiser's family took asylum after Germany's defeat.

"As former heir to the throne of my German fatherland I am willing to offer myself on behalf of my compatriots in this fateful hour," wrote the crown prince in a letter dated Feb. 9, 1920.

"If the Allied and associated governments require a sacrifice let them take me instead of the 900 Germans whose only fault was that they served their fatherland in war."

The proposed trial of German prisoners came up at the Paris peace conference, the documents showed. The 900 never were tried. The late Francesco S. Nitti, then premier of Italy, told of receiving a similar letter from the crown prince and all agreed "no reply should be sent."

What Young People Think

Teen-Agers Feel Reds Ahead In Moon Race

By Eugene Gilbert
President of the Gilbert Youth Research Co.

HARDLY any of America's traditionally adventurous young people, our bright hope in the coming age of space, want to take a chance on the first rocket to the moon.

We polled several hundred of them recently and found that less than one out of 20 (7 per cent of the boys and 2 per cent of the girls) expressed even the slightest enthusiasm for such a trip.

Summing it up for the overwhelming majority, one 12-year-old asked our poll taker:

"Are you kidding? It's not so much the getting there as the getting back."

Patricia Kaplan, a Barnard college freshman, responded:

"You must have lost all your marbles even to consider this."

"Fly first to the moon?" asked Carl Bristol, 15, of the Bronx. "I wouldn't be invited because I'm not Russian."

Reds Make Impression

Carl's caustic comment reflected another aspect of our poll—the deep impression Russia's successful Sputniks have made upon American young people.

Fully three out of four American young people feel sure the Russians will beat the United States in the race to the moon, probably landing an unmanned rocket on the lunar surface by 1960.

And, for many of those we queried, the prospect of a communist victory is fraught with frightening implications.

"The moon could be used as a possible missile base," a 17-year-old boy from Camden, Ark., told our poll takers.

"The one who gets there first will rule the world," in the opinion of Ellen Fagen, 15, of Yonkers, N. Y.

The pessimism about American chances in the space race is about equal among both boys and girls. Among the girls, 73 per cent foresee a Russian victory while 80 per cent of the boys feel the same way.

Why has the United States slipped behind Russia in this important aspect of scientific progress?

Blame Pentagon

Two thirds of youth think it's because American armed services have been competing in the development of the guided missiles necessary to propel a craft into space.

Slightly less than half of the young people think an unmanned rocket (Russian model) will be fired to the moon in the next five years. Half of those select the year 1960.

About one in three feel the epic firing will be made in from five to ten years while nearly one in four think it will take longer than that.

Virtually all (99 per cent) of American young people can foresee a time when manned rockets will be sent to the moon and beyond.

And a large portion of them can see practical military and economic value in being able to travel to the moon and the other planets.

Economically speaking:

"New elements can be found and put to our use," said JoAnn Whalley, 16, of New York.

"It will help toward relieving the overcrowded earth," added 16-year-old Harold Markowitz of Passaic, N. J.

"It will mean more jobs for people who build the rockets," said Johnny Corner, 15, of Kansas City, whose practicality is earthbound.

Patricia Kaplan, a Barnard College freshman, thinks space travel will be the ideal thing for the man or woman who has everything.

"This will give people who have been around the world and have no place to go a chance for some new and exciting thing to do," she said.

Expect Space Visitors

On the military side:

"Planets will make more territory for conquering nations," 16-year-old Linda Tromp of New York told us.

"It will then be possible to watch closely over enemy countries," opined Gloria Schatz, 17, of Forest Hills, N. Y.

There were dissenters, too.

Parolee Found Shot To Death

WILLIAMSPORT, Feb. 10 (AP)—A young man on parole for burglary was found shot to death Saturday in a sporting goods store here.

Police Chief John S. Good ruled the death of Glenn Laubach, 21, of South Williamsport a suicide.

Kansas City boy, sees not practical military value to space travel because "the word 'military' implies war and war is very impractical."

"With missiles being able to travel four to five thousand miles today, why bother shooting all the way for the moon or another planet?" asked a 15-year-old skeptic from Denver.

On the other hand, it wouldn't come as much of a surprise to many young people should creatures from other worlds get in touch with us earthmen. About five out of eight are looking forward to receiving communications from other planets.

And about half of those we polled feel strangers from space are likely to visit earth — perhaps in flying saucers, because more than 20 per cent of the young people think the saucers are real, not imaginary.

But when the space critters do arrive, youth feels we'll have no trouble recognizing them. Nine out of ten think the visitors will be so different that earth people can hardly imagine them.

Three Times

Frank has three times been featured on the CBS-TV "Fred Waring Show" in a musical production of James Weldon Johnson's collection of sermons, titled "God's Trombones." He was supported by the Fred Waring Glee Club and orchestra in the presentation, which has also been recorded by Decca in Album form.

"God's Trombones" is one of the vignettes in "Heart Heart," with Frank playing "The Preacher."

When Fred Waring instigated his "Varsity Showcase" feature on the 1951-52 "Fred Waring Television Show," it was his desire to offer an opportunity for college students to display their professional aptitude. From schools all over the nation came vocalists and musicians to appear in this production feature, Frank Davis, from Xavier University, New Orleans, drew the most favorable mail in the season's competition.

Waring liked the young Navy veteran so much that he invited him to join the Pennsylvanians as a regular, and television viewers and concertgoers over the nation have since enjoyed Frank's magnificent voice as a part of every Fred Waring performance. Everywhere critical acclaim has lauded his talents. And, too, critics have lauded Fred Waring for his fairness in employing the modest, unassuming vocalist.

Frank was born in Iberville Parish, Louisiana, 28 years ago, the son of the late Rev. A. L. and Mrs. Davis. Frank's sister was organist at one of their father's churches and for as long as he can remember his parents fostered his vocal ambitions and nurtured them into realism.

Election Dominates Headlines Of County

EDITOR'S NOTE—This is the 11th in a series of 12 "Year End" stories to appear in The Daily Record. This series deals with the top local news stories of 1957, on the month by month basis.

By Leonard Randolph
LOCAL politicians stole the spotlight from Sputnik early in November last year.

The regular election made big news, but there were few surprises in it. Most people had it sized up the way it turned out—or so they said, after it was all over.

When the ballots were all in they showed President Judge Fred W. Davis had won his fight for a second term in Monroe-Pike county over Russell Mervine, Stroudsburg attorney. Davis was the GOP nominee.

Other County winners, both Democrats: J. Nelson Westbrook, treasurer and Daniel Warner, for coroner. Warner, however, had been nominated on both tickets.

Stroudsburg first ward councilmen Ed Doran won over Samuel Sullivan in the race for borough chief burgess. In East Stroudsburg, incumbent Jesse R. S. Flory was returned to the office of burgess for another term. His opponent was Emerson Stanton.

In the aftermath of election night, these things emerged: Official count of ballots showed no changes in election totals. But County Commissioners and solicitor L. A. Achterman noted that an estimated 415 persons had apparently "lost" their ballots during voting in the election. The total may have been no higher than at other times in the past but it indicated to county officials, at least, that many persons may still not know how to operate voting machines properly.

The election was not without its humorous after-thoughts. Out in Hamilton Township quite a number of residents gathered along Route 209 one post-election day to watch two men and a wheelbarrow. The man pushing was Ambrose J. Smith, 502 Ann St., Stroudsburg. The man who was riding was Charles Praetorius, Snyder'sville.

The sad story: Praetorius bet on Davis; Smith on Mervine. The wager: The loser had to push a wheelbarrow, containing the winner, all the way from Snyder'sville to Scota. The moral: If you must bet, try to make it flat land.

Meanwhile, back in Stroudsburg, borough council was trying to figure out some place to put all those cars that keep coming in on Route 209 and other roads hereabouts. Council authorized its Parking Authority to begin negotiations for purchase of the American Stores' former lot off Sixth and Main; some adjacent land with it.

We were having some rocky moments on plans for the future, too. J. L. Stinson, district engineer for the U. S. Bureau of Public Roads, said during the month that it would take possibly 15 years to lay out the exact route for the Keystone Shortway connecting Stroudsburg and Sharon. Didn't say where he got the estimate for that statement.

But Pocono Mountains Motor Club and its president R. LeRoy Dengler took Stinson to task on the issue right away. The club passed a resolution expressing "dis-satisfaction" with the Stinson statement; in effect, challenged its accuracy.

The Pocono Mountains Chamber of Commerce set up a new kind of committee. It was designed exclusively to provide service to industries already established in the community "in any possible way."

Right along with that announcement came the good news that a new industry—Wyeo Manufacturing Co.—was all set to move in to the former Ransom Corp. Plant in East Stroudsburg. Deal was arranged by the Chamber's industrial committee.

The Motor Club sprang back into the news a few days later with a demand for county-wide planning and zoning. The club asked that the current Commission on planning and zoning be set to work on an overall program. The Commission said it needed money for an outside engineering firm to help it draw up plans.

Dengler, who is also chairman of the Mount Pocono (Pocono Mountains) Airport Authority appeared at a Civil Aeronautics Board hearing in Albany, N. Y., to request airline service at the proposed local field. Later in the month the Authority sent out the sad news that it had $300,000 but it needed $100,000 more to make a go of the first phase of its project.

The Authority's $300,000 in cash on hand and pledges (most of it from the Federal and State governments) was enough to award the first contract needed to get work underway. But Authority members hesitated—they wanted to have enough on hand to be able to go ahead with lighting contracts, too, before they took any steps. The low bid on the first major phase of construction had already been received. But no contract was awarded.

The Daily Record proudly published an "open house" edition. It celebrated, formally, The Record's new home in South Stroudsburg at Broad and Lenox Sts. It contained photos showing much of the interior of the plant and the stages of its construction; suitable editorial copy and ads devoted to the position of a newspaper with-

In a community. Signal Depot public relations man Clyde Burke turned up an interesting story during the month. Burke collects old books. He goes around to auctions and buys them by the bushel basket load. At one of those sales he picked up an old textbook called "The American Preceptor" published way back when. Leafing through the volume, Burke also found a lottery ticket. It was dated April 9, 1821.

The Public Utilities Commission in Harrisburg ordered the reconstruction of the railroad viaduct connecting N. Fifth St. with Route 90. The span was destroyed in the 1955 flood. New structure will be 30-feet wide, two-lane, 328-feet long.

Fire destroyed the Hillside Lodge on Route 290 near Canadensis during the month. November brought death to two widely-known Monroe Countyans: Claude Metzgar, 65, Anabon, veteran County office holder and Stroudsburg industrialist Randall Marsh. At Hemlock Lake, Polk Township, John B. Alfieri, 27, of New York City, a Navy veteran, died of "asphyxiation" in a hunting cabin, police and the coroner said.

Community Chest directors announced that H. Glen Sanborn would serve as chairman of the 1958-59 Chest campaign in the County. On the sports scene, Stroudsburg and East Stroudsburg played their annual Thanksgiving Day classic in the limelight. Both teams had a lot to be thankful for, as did we all, but Stroudsburg took The Little Brown Jug home with them by a 13-12 score. The Jug, in case you don't recall, is the trophy the winning team gets when the goalposts have been dismantled. A derailment did a good job of dismantling 14 freight cars on a Lehigh and New England train near Portland toward the last of November. It took two days to get things back on the track again.

In mid-November a barn of historical significance on the farm home of Mrs. Ennis Davis, Shawnee, burned to the ground. It attracted little attention from most people. But a week later it was hot news all over this area and most of New Jersey.

The reason: a strange story of murder and fantasy told to police by Neils R. Ellis, 27, New Brunswick, N.J. Ellis said he had killed a former employer, Samuel Habit, 66; stowed his body in a car where it slumped, drunk-fashion, on the seat; drove to the barn near Shawnee; transferred the body to the barn and drove away.

Ellis first said he set fire to the barn. Later he denied this. Police were kept busy hopping back and forth on details of the Ellis confession. The man told them he had swallowed poison, at one point. At a Middlesex, N.J. hospital, doctors found no poison. Still later, Ellis insisted the "poison" had damaged his vocal chords. He conversed, from then on, in written notes.

But at the Davis barn in Shawnee, police and Monroe County Coroner Dr. Charles H. Rushmore uncovered the charred remains of what appeared to be a human torso. Laboratory tests showed that it was By month's end the Ellis affair of the "body in the barn" had become firmly entrenched as one of Monroe County's most bizarre "mystery" stories. But the mystery lay not in what had happened so much as in the curiously multi-colored mind of the man who had done it. Neils Ellis seemed to bridge the world between Samuel Habit and the burned barn in a thousand and one dream-like ramblings of his own.

Overshadowing nearly all the rest of the world—including Monroe County—during November came the news of Russia's latest satellite advance. Some wags summed it up in this way: "From Sputnik to Mutt-nik."

It was, of course, the Soviet's second earth satellite. It weighed 1,120 pounds—not counting the poundage of a dog which was sealed in its interior. The dog was first called "Curly"; later was named "Laika."

The news came out of Saturday, Nov. 2. Next day our man MacLeod (Roderick) invented his answer to the Russkies. The Daily Record photographer put together a photo of (1) a dog, (2) a saddle and (3) a kerosene lantern.

It was, he said, a "Saddle-lite."

Some people thought it was corny. But it was better than the U.S. Navy could do with "Vanguard" for all that.

Judge Seeks Office Space For McCool

PRESIDENT Judge Fred W. Davis entered a request for office space for Henry McCool, new Monroe County probation officer yesterday.

At a meeting with County Commissioners, Judge Davis asked that some suitable office space be found to house a desk for McCool and space for his files.

Commissioners agreed to find an office for McCool wherever space is available. McCool will be temporarily located in the Consultants' Room at the Court House, chief clerk H. Ray Saunders said.

HANDLE WITH CARE

The sight of that familiar yellow school bus means one important thing to the careful driver—BE ESPECIALLY CAUTIOUS! Wise motorists know that children are not always as careful as they should be. Young minds can easily forget the rules of safety. This means added responsibility to every driver of a motor vehicle.

When following or approaching a school bus on the road, the motorist must stop when the bus stops. Drive with extra care through school or play areas, remembering always that a ball or toy rolling into the street may be quickly followed by a child. Be a cautious, thoughtful, safe driver. The child you save may be your own.
